The London Serenata is a new wind instrument group formed in 2019. After some very successful performances their music making was curtailed by the pandemic, and now they will be back to perform and entertain us. The members of London Serenata are highly accomplished professional musicians and have been playing together for over twenty years as the wind section of Garsington Opera Orchestra. The ensemble itself was only born in 2019, when the orchestra was disbanded. Determined to continue playing together, these thirteen musicians took the opportunity to emerge from the opera pit as a concert ensemble, to branch out into new repertoire, and to share their music making with a wider audience.
